TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

History The Garrett Collection of Arabic Manuscripts, consisting of over 4,500 titles, belongs to Mr. Robert Garrett, of Baltimore, a trustee of Princeton University. It comprises five units purchased at different times on the recommendation of scholars. The first and largest unit, entered in this Catalog under the numbers 1H to 1171H, is commonly referred to as the Houtsma manuscripts, after the Dutch orientalist Dr. M. Th. Houtsma, who published a list catalog of it entitled Catalogue d'une collection de manuscrits arabes et turcs appartenant à la maison E. J. Brill à Leyden (Leyden, 1889). This group was acquired in 1900 from the well known publishing house in Holland. Brill had purchased most of it from a Medinese scholar Amin ibn-Hasan al-Hulwāni al-Madani al-Hanafi, who brought them to Amsterdam in 1883 on the occasion of the Colonial Exposition. The purchase was made on the recommendation of the Swedish Arabist Count Landberg.

In 1904 the second unit also was acquired from Brill and belonged in the main to the library of the same Medinese scholar. The rest of this Hulwāni library was sold by Brill to Leyden University and to the Royal Library in Berlin. Like the first this group was deposited in the Princeton University Library and a list of its Arabic MSS was published by Dr. Enno Littmann, then of Princeton and now of Tübingen University, under the title A List of Arabic Manuscripts in Princeton University Library (Princeton and Leipzig, 1904).[1] Both units included a few Turkish, Persian[2], Syriac and other MSS in sundry languages which do not fall within the scope of this Catalog. Members of the second unit are entered in our Catalog under numbers 1L to 355L.

The third unit, entered under numbers 1B to 420B, was purchased by Mr. Robert Garrett in 1925 from the estate of Murād Bey Bārūdi, a graduate in pharmacy from the American University of Beirūt. Mr. Bārūdi had exercised unusual care in the choice he made of MSS for his library which, with few exceptions, consisted solely of Arabic works[3]. The purchase was made on the recommendation of Professor Hitti. In the same year in which the Bārūdi unit was acquired there was also bought from Professor Alban G. Widgery of Cambridge, England, his library of Moslem MSS. Only sixteen of this library, indicated in the Catalog by W, are in Arabic and constitute the fourth unit in our Collection. The rest are chiefly in Persian. All of these MSS had been procured by Widgery from Ahmadābād and neighboring towns of Moslem India.

The fifth unit is a miscellaneous group acquired at different times and places. It is entered in the Catalog under numbers 1G to 55G and includes some exquisite codices of the Koran and Kūfic fragments.

1 Littmann contributed an article, "Special Collection in American Libraries: The Garrett Collections of Arabic Manuscripts at Princeton University Library", to The Library Journal, vol XXIX (1904), pp. 238-43.

2 Cataloged by Dr. Nicholas N. Martinovitch, A Catalogue of Turkish and Persian Manuscripts Belonging to Robert Garrett and Deposited in the Princeton University Library (Princeton, 1926).

3 The Bārūdi library was made in 1935 the subject of a dissertation at Princeton by Butrus 'Abd-al-Malik, who expects shortly to publish it. A brief discussion of some of the important items in this library was published by 'Isa Iskandar al-Ma'lūf as "Khazā'in al-Kutub al-'Arabiyah min Nafā'is al-Khizānah al-Bārūdiyah", Majallat al-Majma' al-'Ilmi al-'Arabi, vol. V (1925), pp. 32-4, 135-6, 187-90. Previous to this several items were reported in al-Muqtataf, al-Mashriq, al-Kulliyah and al-Āthār.

Contents The value of the Collection, the largest of its kind in America, lies not so much in its size as in its contents. It has specimens representative of almost all Moslem lands, scripts and disciplines. The authors comprise Spanish Moslems, Berbers, Egyptians, Syrians, Arabians and others of Persian, Turkish and Malay origin. Almost all are Moslems; a few are Christians and Druses from Syria and the Lebanon. One is a Samaritan. Almost all the luminaries of the first magnitude in the intellectual firmament of Islam, such as ibn-Sīna (Avicenna), ibn-Rushd (Averroës), al-Fārābi, al-Rāzi (Rhazes), al-Ghazzāli (Algazel), are represented by one or more works. The dates of composition range from the eighth to the nineteenth century and the provenience from Andalusia and Morocco to Burma. Certain copies are in the handwriting of the authors themselves, several are rare and valuable, some are unique and hitherto undescribed and unpublished.

Islam and auxiliary sciences Works dealing with religion, theology, jurisprudence (fiqh) and tradition (ḥadīth) form, as would be expected, the largest group. Of these we may single out koranic fragments in Kūfi (No. 1139) whose conjectured date is the eighth century. These are the oldest items in the Collection. A tenth century Kūfic fragment (No. 1146) gives a variant reading from the accepted version of the Koran. The codices of the Koran will be discussed under illumination and illustration. The Collection has two clear copies (No. 1479, No. 1481) of al-Iḥyā', the magnum opus of al-Ghazzāli[4], executed in the fourteenth century. An idea of the esteem in which this work has been held throughout the ages may be gained from a declaration by the seventeenth-century Turkish encyclopedist Ḥājji Khalīfah[5], "If all the other books of Islam should perish, the Iḥya', if spared, would suffice." Next to the Iḥyā' the Qūt al-Qulūb of al-Makki (+ 996), of which we have a superb and partly vocalized twelfth-century copy (No. 1570) is considered the classic of Ṣūfi literature. "By some the work is described as one without equal in its field".[6] Another Ṣūfi treatise, dealing with the Illuministic School, was composed by abu-al-Mawahib (+ 1477/8) and copied in 1646 (No. 1583).[7]

Language Next to religion the language and belles-lettres group composes the largest number of MSS in the Collection. Of these attention may be called to al-Qurṭubi's lexicon (No. 265), a unique work so far as we have been able to ascertain. Poetical compositions are especially plentiful. One of the rare dīwāns is a copy of the poems of ibn-Jurayj al-Rūmi (No. 19), a ninth-century poet of Greek origin, and an autograph collection of original poems (No. 109) written in Egypt by 'Ā'ishah bint-al-Bā'ūni + 1523.

Science In science we have excellent samples of those fields in which the Arabs made original contributions, or carried on and preserved for medieval Europe the researches of Greek and Roman scholars: medicine, astronomy, mathematics and philosophy. Outstanding among these is a voluminous translation of Galen's works on anatomy and medicine by the Nestorian Ḥunayn ibn-Isḥāq (Latinized Joannitius + 873), dean of translators from Greek (No. 1075). Though the major part of our copy was written in A.D. 1176, it is well preserved and antedates any Greek or Latin MSS extant. It contains sections not yet edited or translated into any modern European tongue. Another valuable medical treatise (No. 1070) was modeled by al-Rāzi (+ 923) on the aphorisms ascribed to Hippocrates. This work was translated into Hebrew in the Middle Ages, and a Latin translation of it was printed in Bologna (1489) and in Lyons (1510). Our copy, made in 1282, is probably unique.

4 Nabih Amin Faris is preparing a critical edition and translation of this work.

5 Kashf al-ẓunūn, vol. I, p. 180.

6 Ibid. vol. IV p. 580.

7 English translation by Edward J. Jurji, Illumination in Islamic Mysticism, is now in the press.

Another important work is the medical encyclopedia composed by the celebrated ʿAli ibn-al-ʿAbbās al-Majūsi (Haly Abbas, + 994) for the Persian monarch ʿAḍud-al-Dawlah and known as al-Kitāb al-Maliki (Liber regius). We have a copy dated A.H. 586 (A.D. 1190, see Supplement), the only known complete copy of this work, and a fragment (No. 1077) transcribed probably in the sixteenth century. As early as 1127 a Pisan named Stephen translated this book into Latin. This is the only known scientific work which the Crusaders brought back from Syria. Another MS (No. 1094) brings together the names of two of the most distinguished philosopher-physicians of Eastern and Western Islam. It is a commentary by ibn-Rushd of Cordova (+ 1198) on a medical poem ascribed to ibn-Sīna (+ 1037). The copy was made in 1480 and bears an interesting note in Spanish giving authorization from the apostolic inquisitor for its use.

Interest in medicine led to the study of plants and animals. A botanical work (No. 1064) survives from the fifteenth century. It is presumably a unique treatise on herbs and plant morphology based on Dioscorides. The Greek as well as the Arabic names of the plants are given. What gives this copy special value is the excellent illustrations which can hardly be matched in similar works. In zoölogy we have a valuable treatise (No. 1055) on animals and the medicinal properties of various parts of their bodies compiled from the works of Aristotle and other authorities by ibn-Bakhtīshūʿ (d. after 1058), member of an illustrious family of physicians of Syrian origin. MSS of this hitherto unpublished work are very rare. The conjectured date of our copy, probably written by a Christian, is the fourteenth century.

The chief treasure among the astronomical MSS is the masterpiece of al-Farghāni (Alfraganus, d. after 861), a work which was repeatedly done into Hebrew and Latin in medieval and early modern times and enjoyed for a long period a greater circulation in the West than that of any other Moslem astronomer (No. 967)[8].

The field of mathematics may be illustrated by a recension of Euclid's geometry made by the distinguished al-Ṭūsi, vizir of Hūlāgu and his astronomer at Marāghah (No. 1054). This copy, executed by a Turkoman in 1330, is profusely illustrated with well-drawn diagrams in red ink.

Of singular scientific interest are a sixteenth-century treatise on sugar (No. 702), an elaborate work by al-Muhtadi (d. after 1553) on pyrotechnics, richly illustrated with figures and diagrams (No. 1056), and what seems to be a unique copy of a work on archery and marksmanship (No 793).

Philosophy — The philosophical section of ibn Sina's Kitāb al Shifā' is preserved in a sixteenth-century MS two books of which have not yet been published or translated (No. 861). A unique MS, so far as we have been able to ascertain, is that of al-Āmidi (+ 1233) on logic, physics and metaphysics, based on Aristotle, Plato and Pythagoras, as the introduction expressly states (No. 828). That this copy was made in the lifetime of the author is indicated by the prayer following his name, "May his days on earth be made long!" Another philosophical work of major importance is an incomplete copy of the famous epistles of the Ikhwān al-Ṣafā' (No. 1129).

Closely allied with the philosophical studies were the researches made by the Arabs in music. One of the earliest and most distinguished scholars in this joint field was al-Fārābi (+ 950) of Turkish origin, who flourished in the Hamdanid court at Aleppo. We have a copy of his important work on music (No. 1984) illustrated with several diagrams and scales.

History — Another rich field is that of history and biography. One of the oldest historical works is a part of al-Iklīl[9] by al-Hamdani (+ 945), a most valuable source for the ancient history and antiquities of South Arabia (No. 748). What enhances the value of this work is the fact that Islam was considered as having "canceled the past", and therefore hardly any literary material was spared to tell us the story of that glorious civilization that blossomed in the southwestern part of the Peninsula in pre-Islamic times. Among other rare chronicles reference may be made to those of al-Yāfi'i (+1366, No. 591) and of ibn-Kathīr (+1373, No. 592).

Of the biographical works, that of abu-Nu'aym (+1038, No. 669) and an unpublished part of al-Ṣafadi's biographical dictionary (No. 682) stand out as of special importance. A more modern work is an unpublished biography of the Lebanese Amīr Fakhr-al-Dīn al-Ma'ni (+1635, No. 606).

Royal treasures Certain MSS are noteworthy because of their personal associations. Of these some derive interest from the distinction of their owners. Such is the case with a MS from the library of the great Ṣalāḥ-al-Dīn (Saladin) composed for him by one of his secretaries (No. 781). Another is a treatise on astrology expressly transcribed for the library of a great-grandson of Ṣalāḥ-al-Dīn (No. 968), as the medallion on the titlepage states. From the library of Ṣalāḥ-al-Dīn's nephew al-Mu'aẓẓam 'Īsa, sultan of Damascus from 1218 to 1227, we have another unique work dedicated to al-Mu'aẓẓam (No. 1703). According to Ḥājji Khalīfah[10] the sultan "never parted company with this copy whether he was at home or on a journey."

Among the royal treasures is a unique treatise in praise of the horse and on the different breeds in the Mamlūk studs composed and written before 1329 for the Sultan al-Nāṣir by one of his secretaries, who in gold letters dedicated it to his patron (No. 1066). The Mamlūk sultans kept the best Arab thoroughbreds of medieval times. From the library of the Ottoman Sultan Bāyazīd II (1481-1512), son of the conqueror of Constantinople and father of the conqueror of Syria and Egypt, we have one MS in an elegant hand, with headings in gold and with illumination (No. 1249). From Samarqand comes a set of astronomical tables (Zīj) ascribed to its Turkish governor Ulugh Beg at the renowned observatory which he erected in his capital about 1428 (No. 981). Only one work can claim the honor of having been compiled by a sultan, one of the Sharīfs of Morocco (No. 1411). Our copy is presumably the original one, written in the author's hand in 1784.

Other noteworthy copies Other MSS derive their interest from their writers or transcribers. Among such are a neat copy of ibn-Nubātah's Khuṭab (No. 1907) by al-Ṣafadi (+1363), and another on the law of inheritance by ibn-al-Hā'im (+1412/3, No. 1876). The Collection also comprises one autograph copy by the father of the celebrated Egyptian historian al-Jabarti (No. 1007), and another by his contemporary al-Zabīdi (+ 1791, No. 712), author of the comprehensive Arabic lexicon Tāj al-'Arūs. No. 1521 has for its author a Moslem convert from Majorca. Among the modern works is a history of a Lebanon district transcribed by the noted Christian Lebanese scholar and poet Nāṣif al-Yāziji (+ 1871, No. 1996), and a section of Ṣubḥ al-A'sha transcribed by another modern Christian Syrian poet Rizq-Allāh Ḥassūn (+1880, No. 209).

Foremost among the MSS which bear notes of special significance is the one referred to above (No. 1094), which has a note in Spanish dated March 25, 1566, declaring that a Jesuit priest had examined the copy under orders from the apostolic inquisitor and commissary of the new converts in Valencia and that the archbishop had given permission for its use.

Still other works deserve special merit on account of their extraordinary character. Such is the case with a Moslem version of the Psalms copied by an Arabian in 1672 (No. 1987), and a collection of twenty-four different alphabets, including a study of the magical significance of the various characters (No. 749).[11]

Calligraphy The four main varieties of Arabic script : Kūfi, naskhi, Maghribi and Fārisi are represented with their manifold divisions. Since most of the MSS were written by Moslems in al-Ḥijāz, al-'Irāq, Syria and Egypt the cursive, rounded naskhi prevails. But there is hardly a part of the Moslem world which is not represented by one or more examples. Some were transcribed by Persians in Iran and Central Asia and exemplify the elegant Fārisi. A few were executed in Spain and northwestern Africa, where Maghribi is used. Others were transcribed by Indians, Malaysians and Turks, as may be illustrated by No. 1406 (Gujarāt), Nos. 1181, 1183 (East Indies), No. 1059 (Sīwās), No. 979 (Brusa), Nos. 866, 2139 (Constantinople). At least one comes from Sicily (No. 2151), one from Cordova (No. 1358) and one from Russia (No. 1056). A copy of a voluminous dictionary, the only one in existence so far as we know, was made in 1541 by a scribe from Monastir (No. 281). Masterpieces of naskhi and thuluth calligraphy are the fourteenth-century copy of the Burdah (No. 61), ibn-Nubātah's Khuṭab (No. 1907) and Ḥassūn's Subḥ (No. 209). Among the Kūfic hands the most artistic is perhaps koranic fragment No. 1179-D, in badī'.

Over half of the MSS are in the hand of professional scribes. An interesting observation is that in almost every case the professional filled his page with an odd number of written lines, whereas the non-professional writer was not consistent. Moslems in general hold odd numbers in high regard and consider them lucky.

A comparative and critical study of the early MSS reveals the steps by which the Maghribi script developed from Kūfi and the naskhi script from Nabataean. A collection of the eighth- to the eleventh-century Kūfi fragments and Korans on parchment presents a clear picture of the invention and evolution of the diacritical marks and vowel signs. The process may be studied further on the pages of the paper MSS written in naskhi and extending from the tenth to the fifteenth centuries. By that time the system had become definitely established, though we find the distinguished mathematician ibn-al-Hā'im writing an autograph work of his own composition at Jerusalem, March 19, 1398, and using only a few diacritical marks (No. 1876). A comprehensive study in calligraphy, orthography and vocalization is now being made, and we hope it will be published with facsimile reproductions as a companion volume to this Catalog under the title Specimens of Arabic Calligraphy and Illustration Drawn from the Garrett Collection. This contemplated volume should serve to elucidate many hitherto obscure points in the Arabic system of writing and orthography.

Ink The ink used throughout is mostly black and in some MSS brown. In several copies the headings are in red, as are the punctuation marks and other signs denoting new entries or paragraph beginnings. The volume of Specimens, we hope, will include a detailed study of this writing material.

Illumination and illustration Apart from the Korans referred to above, illuminated MSS are quite rare in the Collection. Of the Koran codices several folios compare favorably in elegance of calligraphy and sumptuousness of illumination with their counterparts in Cairo, Constantinople or anywhere else in the world. We know of no more magnificent collection in America. One of them in Kūfi (No. 1156), probably an eleventh-century copy, is written all in gold on vellum. This copy is unique so far as our records go. Another (No. 1170), possibly from the sixteenth century, passed in 1876 into the possession of Ibrāhīm Ḥilmi Pasha, son of the Khedive Ismā'il, of Suez Canal fame, and was mended by him.

The illustrated MSS are equally rare. In addition to the botanical treatise (No. 1064), al-Ṭūsi's geometry (No. 1054), al-Fārābi's book of music (No. 1984) and al-Muhtadi's work on pyrotechnics (No. 1056), cited above, reference may be made to another work by al-Ṭūsi (No. 1055), to a magical treatise with circular charts in colors (No. 965) and to a sixteenth-century copy of ibn-al-Wardi's geography (No. 770) with an elaborately colored map of the world. Some of these illustrations will be reproduced in the volume of Specimens.

Paper The manufacture of writing paper was introduced in the middle of the eighth century into Moslem Samarqand from China. Before the close of the century Baghdād saw its first paper mill. Other factories followed. Egypt had its mills about 900, Morocco about 1100 and Spain about 1150. From Moslem Spain through France and from Italy the manufacture of paper worked its way into Christian Europe.

In our Collection the oldest dated MS is a treatise on dialectics by al-Fīrūzābādi of Shīrāz copied by a scribe from Karmān in 1092 (No. 867). One undated MS (No. 1251) is probably a century earlier. The latest dated MS is a section of the Shihābi's history of Lebanon transcribed in 1899 by Ni'mat-Allāh al-Shihābi of the Ḥalabi Maronite order (No. 624).

A little less than half of our MSS, including of course the earliest, are on oriental paper; the rest are on European. Most of the paper used, whether oriental or European, is glazed. We have observed that the earlier scribes used longer leaves than the later copyists and writers. Most of the European paper was identified from water-marks and from the lines left in the pulp by the brass wires of the mold which supported it while in the water. These wire markings are more numerous and regular than the lines left on oriental paper, in the manufacture of which bamboo reeds and, later, brass wires were used to support the pulp. In the Orient, Syria for a long time produced the finest brand of paper, and in Syria the charta damascena (made in Damascus) and the charta bombycina (made in Manbij, Gr. Bombyx), were the best. In our Collection a few (No. 1138, No. 1146) are on bombycine and at least one (No. 1181) on Japanese mulberry.

Since not much is known about oriental paper and the distribution of European paper in the Moslem East small specimens of forty-nine MSS were sent at the suggestion of Dr. H. M. Lydenberg, Director of the New York Public Library, to the National Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., for examination. This was made by Mr. B. W. Scribner, Chief of Paper Section, assisted by Miss Mary L. Rollins, who performed the fiber analysis. Their report reproduced below constitutes a real contribution: —

Number	Date	Provenience	Type	Kind of fiber	Condition of fiber
2151	1181	Sicily	Glazed Oriental	Ramie	Fair

1138	15th cent.	?	Glazed bombycine	Ramie	Good
1146	10th cent.	?	Bombycine	Ramie	Good

The identification of ramie is open to question in some cases because of the age of the fiber. It could be a coarse grade of flax from the base of the flax stock and could give a darker reaction to the stain because of age. It seems reasonably certain, however, that the fiber is ramie wherever it is so identified. The identification of the fibers was made by the usual procedure of defibering the paper, staining the separate fibers to bring out their structural form, and examining them for characteristic structural differences with a microscope.

It will be noted that the fibers were nearly all in good condition and the same was true of the papers as a whole. It is well known that linen was used in the early days of papermaking, particularly by the Arabs. We have no historical record of the use of ramie, but it is very similar to linen in both its textilemaking and papermaking properties and therefore has probably been generally classified in old papers as linen. Ramie is also known as rhea and China grass. It is said to be indigenous in India and probably also in China. It has been cultivated in China, Japan, Java, Borneo, Sumatra and the East Indies for a great many years. It is used abroad for the manufacture of textiles and, to a small extent, for making paper. The Japanese mulberry is commonly found in old papers, particularly those of Japanese and Chinese origin.

In addition to our thanks to the National Bureau of Standards, which made the test as a service to science, we wish in conclusion to register our gratitude to the staff of the Princeton University Library, represented by Dr. James T. Gerould, Librarian, Mr. George M. Peck, Curator of Special Collections, Miss Reba S. Cawley, Chief of the Catalog Division, and Mr. Lawrence Heyl, Head of Acquisition Department, for the hearty coöperation and the many valuable suggestions we received from them. We wish also to acknowledge the services of three graduate students in the Department of Oriental Languages and Literatures, Harold W. Glidden, Ralph A. Habas and Edward J. Jurji, who helped in the compilation of the Catalog. The clerical work and publication were made possible by a grant from the General Education Board through the Princeton Council of the Humanities, of which Professor Edward Capps is chairman and Professor Albert M. Friend, Jr. secretary. To both of these gentlemen, as well as to Professor Harold H. Bender, Chairman, Department of Oriental Languages and Literatures, and member of the Council, our thanks are due.

Marginal notes and glosses in black and red. The elegy on folios 26 and 27, composed on death of al-Malik al-Ẓāhir abu-al-Fatḥ Ghāzi, Salāḥ-al-Dīn's (Saladin) son, appears in ibn-Khallikān I, pp. 135-7. MS begins with statement that the poetical works of the author were collected and arranged by his friend and admirer Ḥasan ibn-Muḥammad al-Qaylawi, because the author paid little attention to the collection of his works. MS is of very special historical importance in study of Ayyūbid period. MS in fair condition ; oriental binding ; blind stamped.

Colophon: والحمد لله اولاً وآخراً وباطناً وظاهراً وهو بكل شيء عليم وهو التواب الرحيم ولا حول ولا قوة الا بالله العلي العظيم .

Marginal glosses; ruled marginal lines in red. On the first 23 folios are inscribed the story of the collection of the Dīwān and a short biography of the author. On folio 84 appears the colophon of the copy from which our MS has been transcribed; it is dated A.H. 995 [A.D. 1587] and was transcribed by Ḥasan al-Barshūmī. Between the two colophons are three poems which do not belong to the Dīwān proper. There are autographs of two owners on the titlepage and another on the page after the colophon. On the inside of the front cover is a memorandum for the receipt of a riyal [dollar]. The mystic ibn-al-Fāriḍ devotes a large part of his Dīwān to poems concerned with divine love and pantheistic philosophy. Fols. 60 ; 17.4 x 13 cm. ; written surface 13 x 9 cm. ; 11 lines to page ; on glazed oriental paper ; in naskhi ; with vowel signs ; with catchwords ; black and red throughout.

Two poems rhyming in mīm in praise of the Prophet. The first was composed by al-Shammā', who is also a joint author of the second poem, which is of the type idā'. In this idā' the first hemistich of the first verse of the Burdah constitutes the first hemistich of the first verse in the present ode, the continuation of which is supplied by al-Shammā'. The second hemistich of the first verse of the Burdah constitutes the second hemistich of the second verse of the present poem, the beginning of which is likewise supplied by the author.

Beg. : بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم وبه ثقتي، هذه البديعيّة البديعة.

Colophon : والحمد لله حمدًا لا نفاذ له واشكر الله في بداو [بدو] ومختتم. تمت .

Marginal notes by a later hand on folio 44. On folio 17 is a "tree of poetry" entitled The Tree Comprising the Rising Stars. It contains the names of the Prophet and his Companions. Folio 28, on which the second poem begins, has been marked by a later hand with a blue silk thread stitched into it. The dates of composition of both poems are mentioned in the last verses of each, the first being A.H. 860 [A.D. 1456] and the second A.H. [8]57 [A.D. 1453]. Both were first written in the enclosure around the Ka'bah. The name of the author appears in the first poem on folio 26 and in the second poem on folio 29. A verse on folio 28 in the first poem states that its verses total 299, while actually they number 295. A similar verse on the last folio in the second poem states that its verses total 370, but in fact they number only 352. Page immediately after the colophon has a number of medical prescriptions for poisoned wounds and information on the use of banj (bhang). Fols. 8; 17.6 x 12 cm ; written surface 11.5 x 8 cm. ; 15 lines to page ; on glazed oriental paper ; in naskhi ; with catchwords ; headings and rubrications in red.

Amplification (takhmis) of 'Abd-al-Qādir al-

Kīlāni's poem which begins: ma fi al-ṣabābati manhilun musta'dhabu, by ibn-Ḥijjah and Badr-al-Dīn ibn-al-Ṣāḥib.

Beg.: بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم وبه ثقتي . ممّا وجد في كتاب ما صورته .

Colophon: تمت بحمد الله تعالى وحسن توفيقه وصلى الله على سيدنا محمد واله .

Marginal notes in different hands. Folios 2, 4, 5 and 7 are foxed and mended with gauze. The work was composed A.H. 797 [A.D. 1394/5] in Ma'arrat al-Nu'mān, where al-Ḥasan ibn-'Ali ibn-Muḥammad ibn-Yaḥya ibn-Aḥmad ibn-Muḥammad ibn-Naṣr ibn-abi-Bakr 'Abd-al-Razzāq ibn-'Abd-al-Qādir al-Kīlāni, a descendant of the great Kīlāni, asked ibn-Ḥijjah to amplify the poem and showed him a previous amplification of the same poem by ibn-al-Ṣāḥib. Ibn-Ḥijjah, not pleased with previous amplification, decided to have it appear side by side with his own in order to reveal the marked differences. Ironically he called the work Rashf al-Manhilayn, his own and that of ibn-al-Ṣāḥib. First paragraph of MS indicates that same man at whose request work was composed is also scribe to whom ibn-Ḥijjah dictated MS. MS in poor condition; modern western binding.

Marginal notes. Marginal lines ruled in red. Title lacking. Work inspired by the author's zeal to emulate those who had eulogized the Prophet, especially ibn-Ḥijjah and al-Suyūṭi. The author's name appears only in the text of the poem and that in part. On four folios after colophon there are a short thesis attributed to ibn-Ḥijjah A.H. 767-837 [A.D. 1366-1434] and entitled Risālat al-Sayf w-al-Qalam, several verses by unknown authors and a short biographical note about ibn-Ḥijjah. These are followed by seven folios containing miscellaneous quotations of poetry, grammar and rhetoric. MS in good condition ; oriental binding with flap.

Marginal notes and glosses ; first page illuminated in gold and color ; ruled marginal lines in gold on the first two folios and in red throughout. It is evident from the colophon that MS was copied for Muhammad Afandi al-Qādiri al-Kīlāni. On the titlepage are autographs of several owners, three blurred seals and another unintelligible one. On the folio before the titlepage occur 3 verses of poetry, the date of the death of 'Abd-al-Qādir al-Kīlāni, a statement by al-Dhahabi about al-Safarjalāni and some scribblings. Fols. 4 ; 21 x 15 cm. ; written surface 19.5 x 13 cm. ; 18-20 lines to page ; on oriental paper ; in naskhi ; with catchwords.

Two odes, the first rhyming in khāl and the second in rā'.

Beg. : بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم . الحمد لله رب العالمين مالك يوم الدين .

Colophon : تمت القصيدة .

In the introduction the author states that he composed his first ode with the rhyme khāl in response to the suggestion of a Turkish poet who composed a Turkish ode with the same rhyme. The author composed his ode and sent it to Dāwūd Pasha, former governor of Baghdād, who sent it to some poets in Baghdād; one of these sent an ode rhyming in rā' criticising Butrus Karāmah's ode because he was a Christian. The author composed his second ode rhyming in rā' in answer to that criticism. On the titlepage occurs an obliterated seal. On the two folios after the colophon are a fragment on music by al-'Aṭṭār 'Ali and a seal that reads: bi-al-yumn ... Salāmah. On the two following folios occurs an ode in eulogy of abu-al-Mawāhib al-Bakri al-Ṣiddīqi + A.H. 1037 [A.D. 1627/8] by 'Abd-al-Raḥmān al-Mallāḥ. In the Catalogue of the Cambridge MSS no. 1081, the same name of al-Khawarizmi occurs But in Gotha 173, Br. Mus. Supp. 712/3, Paris 2334/5 and Berlin 8859 the author's name is given as Jamal-al-Din abu-'Abdullah Muhammad ibn-Ahmad al-Qazwini + A.H. 527 [A.D. 1132/3]. In Br. Mus. 746 it is only al-Qazwini al-Shāfi'i. In Ḥajji Khalifah VI, p. 42 and in Cairo Catalogue VII, p. 701 the book is ascribed to "ba'd muta'akhkhiri fuḍalā' al-Maghāribah". Whatever his name, the author in all likelihood lived in the first half of the sixth century of the Hijrah and wrote sometime after A.H. 527 [A.D. 1132/3], for on folio 603a he quotes Khalid ibn-abi-al-Qāsim 'Ali ibn-Ya'la and speaks of him as dead. A traditionist of that name went to Qazwīn in A.H. 523 [A.D. 1128/9], stayed there some years and died A.H. 527 [A.D. 1132/3]. See ibn al-Athīr, vol. XI, p. 5. Al-Ṣiḥāḥ fi al-Lughah الصحاح في اللغة [The Accurate Lexicon]

Copied A.H. 724 [A.D. 1324] by ʿAbdullāh ibn-Dāwūd ibn-Aḥmad al-Iṣfahāni.

Fols. 407 ; 28.8 x 20 cm. ; written surface 22.9 x 15.5 cm. ; 30 lines to page ; on glazed oriental paper ; in naskhi ; with full vowel signs ; with catchwords ; entries in red ; with illuminations.

A famous lexicon arranged in sections according to the last letter of each root ; each of these in turn is divided into divisions according to the first letter of the root. The work is in two volumes.

Beg. : بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم . الحمد لله شكرا على نواله والصلوة على محمد وآله . اما بعد فاني قد اودعت هذا الكتاب ما صح عندي .

Colophon : هذا آخر كتاب الصحاح في اللغة . الحمد لله رب العالمين وصلى الله على سيدنا محمد وآله وصحبه الطيبين الطاهرين اجمعين .

A few marginal notes ; ruled marginal lines in gold red and color on the first two pages and in red throughout the rest. On the titlepage are illuminations consisting of one rectangular panel at the top of the folio which contains the title written in blue on a gold background. Beneath this and occupying the center of the page is a hexagonal medallion with geometrical and florate motifs in green, blue and two tones of gold, bearing the author's name in blue on a gold background. At the bottom of the folio there was probably a panel matching that at top ; this has been destroyed. At the top of the first page is a panel whose central portion is occupied by the basmalah in colorless letters on a blue background. This is flanked on either side by squares bearing rosettes in green and two tones of gold. The whole is enclosed by a Greek border. On the titlepage is the autograph of an owner and an Arabic seal bearing the name "Maḥmūd". The first folio is defective. The last folio was supplied by a later hand. MS in good condition; oriental leather binding ; color stamped and blind tooling.

Fols. 30; 20.5 x 14.2 cm.; written surface 16 x 9 cm.; 29 lines to page; on glazed European paper; in naskhi; with catchwords; entries in red.

A compendium containing a brief account of the lives of twenty ancient philosophers.

Beg.: بسم الله ... وبعد... فاحببت ان اخدم حضرته الشريفة بتاليف كتاب ... يشتمل على بعض ما قالته جماعة من الحكماء

Colophon : تم الكتاب بعون الله الملك الوهاب على يد اضعف العباد واحوجهم يوم التناد عمر بن عبد الله وذلك نهار الثلاثاء السابع عشر من ذي القعدة سنة ست وسبعين والف من هجرة من له العز وغاية الشرف . صلى الله عليه وعلى آله كلما ذكره الذاكرون وكلما غفل عن ذكر[ه] الغافلون وحسبنا الله ونعم الوكيل . ولا حول ولا قوة الا بالله العلي العظيم . م .

A few marginal notes. The author, we learn from the introduction, composed his work and then dedicated it to al-Nāṣir Yūsuf ibn-Muḥammad ibn-Ghāzi ibn-Yūsuf ibn-Ayyūb, who ruled in Aleppo A.D. 1236-60 and in Damascus A.D. 1250-60, and who died A.H. 659 [A.D. 1261].

On the titlepage, however, the work is ascribed to 'Umar ibn-Ẓafar, the author of Sulwān al-Muṭā'. This evidently is a mistake because the author of Sulwān al-Muṭā' was Muḥammad ibn-abi-Muḥammad ibn-Ẓafar and not 'Umar and because Muḥammad ibn-Ẓafar died A.H. 565 [A.D. 1174], ninety-one years before the Ayyūbid Sultan to whom the work was dedicated. MS in good condition; oriental leather binding; blind stamped. Probably unique.

Kitāb al-Ṣinā'ah al-Ṣaghīrah كتاب الصناعة الصغيرة [The Book of the Minor Art]

Copied A.H. 572 [A.D. 1176/7] by 'Uthmān ibn-'Ali ibn-Muḥammad al-Samarqandi.

Fols. 372; 25.5 x 17 cm.; written surface 20.5 x 12 cm.; 21 lines to page; on glazed oriental paper (except the first thirty-one folios which are on European paper); in naskhi; with vowel signs.

The Arabic version of nine of the medical works of Galen (fl. during the second half of the second Christian century), one of the greatest physicians of antiquity. The present Arabic translation is the work of Ḥunayn ibn-Isḥāq, the famous Nestorian physician and dean of translators from Greek in the 'Abbāsid period of renaissance, better known to the Latin West as Joannitius. The nine works contained in this volume are:

1. Kitāb al-Ṣinā'ah al-Ṣaghīrah كتاب الصناعة الصغيرة [The Book of the Minor Art]. This is commonly called Ars parva. It comprises 28 folios and is found in manuscript form in Paris 2860[2]. Greek text and Latin translation published by Karl Gottlob Kühn (Leipzig, 1820-33) A critical discussion of the work is the subject of an inaugural dissertation by Arthur Müller-Kypke (Berlin, 1893).

2. Kitāb al-Buḥrān كتاب البحران [The Book on Crises], called in Latin De crisibus. It comprises 28 folios. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn. No translation into any modern language.

3. Kitāb Aṣnāf al-Ḥummayāt كتاب اصناف الحميات [The Book on the Different Kinds of Fever], known in Latin as De differentiis febrium. It comprises 14 folios. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn. No translation into any modern language.

4. Ḥīlat al-Bur' حيلة البرء [The Method of Cure], known in Latin as Methodus medendi. It is frequently called Therapeutics or The Great Therapeutics. It comprises 114 folios and is found in manuscript form in Paris 2855. The work is in fourteen books and was diligently studied in the Middle Ages under the title Makrotechne (The Sublime). Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn. Under the direction of Pagel and Sudhoff, the greater part of the work has been recently translated into German in inaugural dissertations by Brink, Beck, Meyer, Wandersleben, Carney, Prusmann, Schröder, Glaser, Voigt, Beck, Tietz and Szczepanski. In addition there is an English translation of a part of it by Thomas Gale (1586) and a much abridged English translation of the entire work by Peter English (1656).

5. Tadbīr al-Aṣiḥḥā' تدبير الاصحاء [The Régime of the Healthy], better known as Hygiene. It comprises 48 folios. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn; Greek text published in the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum (Berlin, 1923) under the editorship of Koch, Helmreich, Kalbfleisch and Hartlich. No translation into any modern language.

6. Firaq al-Aṭibbā' فرق الاطباء [Schools of Physicians], better known as Medical Sects. It comprises 17 folios and is found in manuscript form in Paris 2860[1]. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn; French translation by Charles Daremberg in Oeuvres Anatomiques Physiologiques et Medicales de Galien (Paris, 1856), vol. II, pp. 376-97.

7. Kitāb al-Nabaḍ ila Tūtharun كتاب النبض الى طوثرن [The Book of the Pulse Addressed to Teuthras]. This is commonly known as The Pulse for Beginners and was written by Galen for his friend and compatriot, the Pergamenian physician Teuthras. It comprises 17 folios and is found in manuscript form in Paris 2860[3]; cf. Berlin 6230. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn; English translation by Broadbent in his work The Pulse (New-York, 1890).

8. Shifā' al-Amrāḍ ila Ughlūqin شفاء الامراض الى اغلوقن [The Cure of Diseases Addressed to Glaucon], better known as Therapeutics to Glaucon in order not to confuse it with The Method of Cure (no. 4). Glaucon was a philosopher friend of Galen. The work comprises 61 folios and is found in manuscript form in Paris 2860[4]. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn; French translation by Charles Daremberg in Oeuvres Anatomiques Physiologiques et Medicales de Galien (Paris, 1856), vol II, pp, 706 seq.

9. Kitāb al-Isṭaqsāt 'ala Ra'y Buqrāṭ كتاب الاسطقسات على رأي بقراط [The Book of the Elements According to Hippocrates], universally known as The Elements According to Hippocrates. It comprises 34 folios and is found in manuscript form in Paris 2847[1]. Greek text and Latin translation by Kühn; Greek text edited by Georg Helmreich (Erlangen, 1878). No translation into any modern language.

Unlike the rest of the MS, the first thirty-one folios, which contain the introduction and The Book of the Minor Art, have been copied in Wādi al-Kabīr, A.H. 1138 [A.D. 1726] by Muḥammad Amīn al-Ḥasani ibn-'Abdullāh al-Tūqāti. The other eight works belong to the same date of copying, A.H. 572 [A.D. 1176/7], which date appears in the colophon of the fifth work. MS in excellent condition; oriental leather binding.

Acquired by Ananikian from Egypt, A.D. 1924.

KORAN

13 G 1138

Al-Qur'ān القرآن (fragment).

Fols. 44; 28.7 x 20.5 cm.; written surface 21.5-22 x 13.5 cm.; 3-5 lines to page; on glazed bombycine paper; in naskhi; with illuminations.

Contains Sūrahs VIII:42--IX:94.

A section of the Koran handsomely written in gold letters. On folio 1 recto is a circular medallion whose center is occupied by a hexagon containing floral designs in gold and color on a red gold background. The outer portion is composed of gold foliate interlacing on a blue background. Folios 1 verso and 2 recto are illuminated with blue and gold borders. At the top and bottom of each of these folios are panels with gold floral designs on a blue background; in the center is a Kūfi text in white ink. Both of these folios have each 3 gold and blue rosettes in the margin, and the text is separated by irregular panels of foliate and floral design. At the top of folio 13 and marking the beginning of Sūrah IX is a rectangular panel of blue and white on a gold background; in the center of this is the name of the Sūrah in white Kūfi outlined with gold on a blue background. The sections are marked by gold and blue medallions; the verses by smaller medallions in the same colors.

Persian paper binding with leather back. MS in good condition except water-stained. MS is probably from XVth century.

Acquired A.D. 1912.

14 G (a) 1139

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 31.8 x 24.2 cm.; written surface 27.5 x 20.2 cm.; 17 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; very few diacritical marks.

Sūrah XXI:16--37 (in part).

Folio defective. Probably from VIIIth century.

14 G (b) 1140

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 8.6 x 21.8 cm.; written surface 6x16.5 cm.; 5 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; with few diacritical marks.

Sūrah XXIII:78 (in part)--79 (in part) and 80 (in part)—82 (in part).

Text is decorated with gold and green dots. At the beginning of verse 82 is a rosette in gold and color. MS probably from early VIIIth century.

14 G (c) 1141

Al-Qur'ān (fragment)

Fol. 1; 15.5 x 25.6 cm.; written surface 10.7 x 16.2 cm.; 5 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; diacritical marks by a later hand.

Sūrah XXXVI:19 (in part)—22 (in part).

Text is decorated with red dots. Green diacritical marks by a later hand. In the margins are a floral decoration in gold and a medallion in gold and color MS probably from VIIIth century.

14 G (d) 1142

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 16 x 28 cm.; written surface 10 x 21 cm.; 4 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi.

Sūrah LXIX:35 (in part)—37 and 38 (in part)

—41 (in part).

Text is decorated with red and green dots; verses are separated with gold medallions. MS from VIIIth century.

14 G (c) 1143

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 4; 12.5 x 18 cm.; written surface 9.5 x 14 cm.; 16 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi.

Sūrah V:34 (in part)—82 (in part).

Text is decorated with red dots. MS water-stained. Probably from IXth century.

15 G (a) 1144

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 2; 26.5 x 15 cm.; written surface 25.5 x 13.5 cm.; 22 lines to page; on bombycine paper; in Kūfi; with diacritical marks; with vowel signs.

Sūrah II:201 (in part)—234 (in part).

The vowel signs are dots in red. They are similar to the Eastern Syriac system of vocalization from which they were probably taken. The dammah is represented by a red dot to the right of the letter, the fathah by one over and the kasrah by one below (cf. al-Suyūṭi, Itqān, Cairo, 1925, vol. II, p. 171, ll. 27-8). A double vowel is represented by two dots. The diacritical marks are the ordinary ones. A few marks in green have been added by a later hand. MS defective, probably from Xth century.

15 G (b) 1145

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 5; 28.3 x 18 cm.; written surface 24.5 x 15 cm.; 22 lines to page; on bombycine paper; in Kūfi; with diacritical marks; with vowel signs.

Sūrah III:41 (in part)—110 (in part).

For detailed description of text see 1144. MS in fair condition; probably from Xth century.

15 G (c) 1146

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 4; 28.3 x 18 cm.; written surface 24.5 x 15 cm.; 22 lines to page; on bombycine paper; in Kūfi; with diacritical marks; with vowel signs.

Sūrah XI:109—XII:77 (in part).

For detailed description of text see 1144. It is important to note that the fragment has a variant reading for XII:12. Instead of أَرْسِلْهُ مَعَنَا غَدًا يَرْتَعْ وَيَلْعَبْ وَإِنَّا لَهُ لَحَافِظُونَ which is the 'Uthmānic reading, the fragment reads أَرْسِلْهُ مَعَنَا غَدًا نَرْتَعْ وَنَلْعَبْ وَإِنَّا لَهُ لَحَافِظُونَ. MS in fair condition; probably from the Xth century.

15 G (d) 1147

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 28.3 x 18 cm.; written surface 24.5 x 15 cm.; 22 lines to page; on bombycine paper; in Kūfi; with diacritical marks; with vowel signs.

Sūrah XXIII:28 (in part)—68 (in part).

For detailed description of text see 1144. MS in fair condition; probably from Xth century.

15 G (e) 1148

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 2; 28 x 18.5 cm.; written surface 24.5 x 15 cm.; 22 lines to page; on bombycine paper; in Kūfi; with diacritical marks; with vowel signs.

Sūrah XLI:1—50 (in part).

For detailed description of text see 1144. MS in fair condition; probably from Xth century.

16 G 1149

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. I; 19.2 x 12.2 cm.; written surface 12.2 x 8.1 cm.; 10 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi.

Sūrah IV:81 (in part)—85 (in part).

Text is decorated with red and green dots of color. At the beginning of verse 84 is a medallion in gold and color. MS is probably from VIII century.

17 G 1150

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. I; 17.3 x 11.1 cm.; written surface 13.3 x 7.1 cm.; 15 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi.

Sūrah VII:112 (in part)—131 (in part).

A few diacritical marks of later date; text is decorated with red spots; defective. MS is probably from the VIIIth century.

Cf. William Wright, Facsimiles of Manuscripts and Inscriptions, pl. XIX.

18 G 1151

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 4; 17.3 x 14 cm.; written surface 9.8 x 8 cm.; 5 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi.

Sūrah XXVIII:40 (in part)—45 (in part).

A few diacritical marks; text decorated with dots of red and green; gold medallion in margin of first folio; verses are marked by gold rosettes. Parchment is water-stained. MS probably from VIIIth century.

19 G 1152

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 30.5 x 20.3 cm.; written surface 22.5 x 14 cm.; 3 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; with few diacritical marks.

Sūrah XIV:27—28 (in part).

Verses are separated with triangles formed by six gold spots; text is decorated with red and green spots. MS is mended. MS probably from IXth century.

Cf. Sylvestre, Paléographie, vol. I, fol. 192.

20 G 1153

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 30.5 x 20.3 cm.; written surface 22.5 x 14 cm.; 3 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; with few diacritical marks.

Sūrah XIV:22 (in part)—25 (in part).

Verses are separated with triangles formed by six gold dots; text is decorated with red and green dots. In the margin is a gold medallion. MS probably from IXth century.

Cf. Sylvestre, vol. I, fol. 192.

21 G 1154

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fols. 2; 30.5 x 20.3 cm.; written surface 22.5 x 14 cm.; 3 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; with few diacritical marks.

Sūrah XII:69 (in part)—74 (in part).

Verses are separated with triangles formed by six gold dots; text is decorated with red and green dots. In margin of folio one verso is a gold medallion. MS probably from IXth century.

Cf. Sylvestre, vol. I, fol. 192.

22 G 1155

Al-Qur'ān (fragment).

Fol. 1; 32.5 x 22.8 cm.; written surface 24.3 x 17 cm.; 17 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; with few diacritical marks.

Sūrah X:28 (in part)—44.

Verses 31, 32 and 41, 42 are separated by gold squares; text is decorated with red dots. Probably from IXth century.

35 G 1156

Al-Qur'ān.

Fols. 206; 36.5 x 27.4 cm.; written surface 28 x 20.3 cm.; 15 lines to page; on vellum; in Kūfi; with a few diacritical marks; with a few vowel signs.

An incomplete Koran comprising Sūrahs I—XVIII.

Ruled marginal lines with decorations in gold and color; full text in gold. The first four folios are elaborately illuminated. The diacritical marks and vowel signs are probably a later addition. MS in good condition; oriental leather binding; gilt stamped. Probably from the XIth century. Copy of great value and of unique nature.

39 G 1157

Al-Qur'ān.

Fols. 244; 36 x 30.5 cm.; written surface 26x 21 cm.; 19 lines to page; on glazed oriental paper; in Kūfi; with diacritical marks; with vowel signs; with illuminations.

An incomplete Koran comprising Sūrahs I—CXI.

Margins decorated with medallions in gold and color. First two folios illuminated in gold and color. MS in fair condition; fragile and foxed; oriental leather binding; blind stamped. MS probably from XIIth century.

28 G 1158

Numb. fols. 292; 23.5 x 17.2 cm.; written surface 16 x 11 cm.; 17 lines to page; on glazed oriental paper; in naskhi; with catchwords; entries in red.

A well-known work in two parts : (1) An account of the religious sects, (2) an account of the philosophical sects. After five introductory chapters the author proceeds to arrange his work in these two divisions. The first of these contains an account of various Moslem sects, the Scripturaries, namely the Jews and the Christians, and those who had a doubtful or pretended revelation such as the Magi and Manicheans. The second comprises an account of the philosophical opinions of the Ṣābians, of the tenets of various Greek philosophers and some of the Fathers of the Christian Church, and also of Moslem doctors, more particularly of the system of ibn-Sīna (Avicenna). The work is concluded with an account of the tenets of the Arabs before the advent of Islam, and of the religion of the people of India.

Al-Mudawwanah المدونة [The Written Collection]

Fols. 126; 25.6 x 19.6 cm.; written surface 18.5 x 13 cm.; 20 lines to page; on vellum; in Maghribi.

The major part of one of the best works on Mālikite law and jurisprudence according to the narrative of Saḥnūn abu-Sa'īd ibn-'Abd-al-Salām al-Tanūkhi + A.H. 240 [A.D. 854]. According to ibn-Khallikān (I, p. 494) Saḥnūn received the contents of al-Mudawwanah from ibn-al-Qāsim. The first who undertook to draw up a Mudawwanah was the Mālikite doctor, Asad ibn-al-Furāt + A.H. 213 [A.D. 828/9]. It originally consisted of questions proposed by him to ibn-al-Qāsim with their solution by the latter; he then took them with him to al-Qayrawān and Saḥnūn wrote them out under his direction; it was called the Asadīyah, but as the questions were without any order in this first sketch, Saḥnūn drew them up under separate headings and augmented their number. This present volume contains the books on (1) al-Ṣiyām w-al-I'tikāf, (2) al-Ḥudūd fi al-Qadhf, (3) al-'Atq.

Mazāmīr wa-Tasābīḥ wa-Ṣalawāt Kitābīyah مزامير وتسابيح وصلوات كتابية [Psalms, Hymns and Prayers from the Scriptures]

Copied, Coptic Era 986 [A.D. 1270].

Fols. 111; 24 x 17.5 cm.; written surface 17 x 10.5 cm.; 11 lines to page, on glazed oriental paper; in naskhi; with vowel signs; headings in gold and color; illuminated.

An early translation of the Psalms of David used in the Coptic Church. The copy contains Psalms 5 (in part), 6, 7 (in part), 37 (in part) and 45 (in part) mixed up together, 23-32 (in part), 37 (in part)-151. The extra psalm, no. 151, is marked in the margin as such, and is said to have been written by David when he killed Goliath. The numbers attached to psalms in the copy do not agree with those in the modern translations. (Psalm 23 is marked in the copy 22, 51 is marked 50, and so on.) This translation varies greatly from all the other translations. After the Psalms are: the song of Moses (Exod. 15:1-19) with other accretions, the song of Hannah the mother of Samuel (I Sam. 2:1-10), the song of Hezekiah after his recovery (Isaiah 38:9-20), the prayer of Manasseh, indicated but not cited in II Chron. 33:12-13 and mentioned in the Apocrypha, Jonah's prayer from the belly of the fish (Jonah 2:1-9), a song attributed to Isaiah, the story of Shadrach, Meschach and Abed-nego (Dan. 3), the Song of the Three Holy Children, the song of Mary (Luke 1:46-56), and the song of Zacharias (Luke 1:68-79).

MS richly illuminated; in good condition but worm-eaten. Oriental leather binding with flap; blind stamped.

Acquired from Bārūdi, Beirūt, A.D. 1925.

1. Al-Kalimāt al-Sharīfah fi Tanzīh abi-Ḥanīfah 'an al-Turrahāt al-Sakhīfah, a defense in which the author, Nūḥ ibn-Muṣṭafa [al-Rūmi] al-Ḥanafi + A.H. 1070 [A.D. 1659/60], refutes a story told by Imām al-Ḥaramayn al-Juwayni + A.H. 478 [A.D. 1085] in his book Mughīth al-Khalq fi Ikhtiyār al-Ḥaqq and quoted by ibn-Khallikān + A.H. 681 [A.D. 1282] in Wafayāt al-A'yan vol. II p. 518. The events of the story are supposed to have taken place in the court of the Ghaznawid sultan, Maḥmūd Yamīn-al-Dawlah A.H. 388-421 [A.D. 999-1030] and are derogatory of both abu-Ḥanīfah and his school, for which reason, we are told, the sultan favored the Shāfi'ite system.

2. A treatise by the same Nūḥ ibn-Muṣṭafa on the difference between the Koran and the ḥadīth and between the ḥadīth qudsi and the ḥadīth nabawi entitled Risālah Laṭīfah fi al-Farq bayn al-Qur'ān w-al-Ḥadīthayn wa-bayn al-Ḥadīthayn.

The work was composed for the Buwayhid 'Aḍud-al-Dawlah Fanna Khusraw, reigned A.D. 949-83. Its best parts are devoted to dietetics and materia medica. Among its original contributions are a rudimentary conception of the capillary system and a proof that in the act of parturition the child does not come out by himself but is pushed out by the muscular contraction of the womb. In A.D. 1127 it was translated into Latin by a Pisan, Stephen of Antioch. The present copy is one of two known complete copies, the other being in the possession of Dr. Sami Ḥaddad, American University of Beirūt, Beirūt.
